

with the Hoops Institute of Taxation Research and Policy at the WSU College of Business

Budget Crisis & Grand Bargains

With Democrats and Republicans entrenched, a long-term budget agreement will be difficult to reach. Our panel of experts will discuss the possibilities involving entitlement reform, revenue increases, and further budget cuts.

Nicholas Carnes is Assistant Professor of Public Policy at Duke University. His research focuses on American politics, economic and social class inequality, political representation, legislative decision making, and urban politics.

Christopher Faricy is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Washington State University. His research areas include public policy, political economy, political institutions and public opinion.

John Wilkerson is Professor of Political Science at the University of Washington. His research centers on legislative studies, and how new information technologies can advance political science research and teaching.

Thursday, April 18
4 – 5:30pm
305 Bryan Hall