Stop Watching Fox News!

Can we affect people's preferences for like-minded information?

Do the media determine a person's political ideology or does a person's politics determine the type of news they watch? How are habits formed with information intake and how might they be modified or broken?

Natalie Stroud is Associate Professor of Communication Studies and Assistant Director of the Annette Strauss Institute for Civic Participation at the University of Texas Austin. Stroud's work on selective exposure has received several awards, including the Michael Pfau Outstanding Article Award from the National Communication Association and the K. Kyoon Hur Award from the International Communication Association.
