

OPEN REDCEDAR ADAPTION NETWORK

ABOUT THIS PROJECT

ARE TREES FROM OREGON BETTER ADAPTED TO FUTURE CLIMATES IN WASHINGTON?

We are concerned about the survival of western redcedar in future climates.

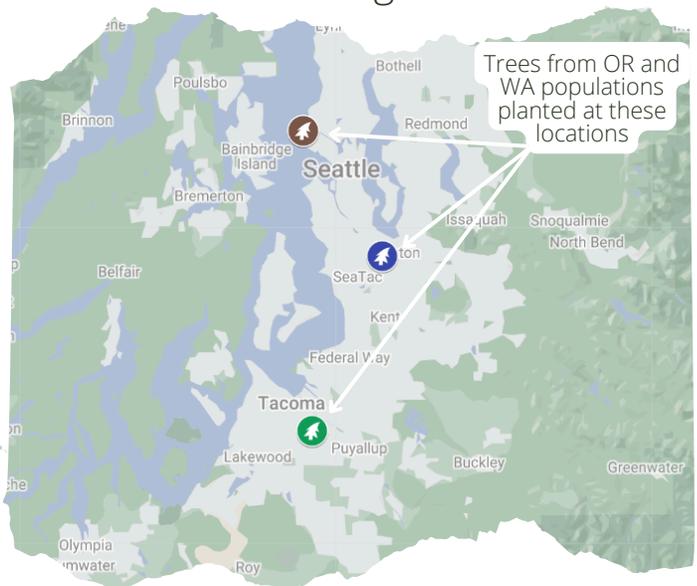

This climate adaptation study explores the genetic diversity of western redcedar as a tool for keeping trees healthy.

Together, we can investigate if trees adapted to climates in Oregon will be better suited for upcoming climates in Washington.

IMAGE CREDIT: FRÉDÉRIC BEC

GET INVOLVED

Current Redcedar Planting Locations:
Discovery Park (Seattle), Black River Riparian Forest (Renton), Swan Creek Park (Tacoma).