

Currently potato quality evaluation using calipers is tedious and time-consuming; however, image processing provides a high-throughput and efficient way to assess potato tuber quality.