Abstract:

This presentation will have two parts. In the first part, we will provide an overview of the cybersecurity program at Columbia Basin College (CBC). We will highlight key curricular activities and discuss our interactions with communities and industries around the college.

The second part of the presentation (to be given by Eric Robinson) will highlight specific examples of recent student projects and activities around cybersecurity at CBC.

Bio:

Matthew (Matt) Boehnke is an associate professor in the Cybersecurity Department at Columbia Basin College, Pasco, WA. He is the first director of the Cybersecurity Department. He was responsible for the initial development and integration of the first ever community college level curriculum that combined real world practical applications in cybersecurity to the classroom. He has established initial and ongoing relationships with lead US Department of Energy, National Laboratory partnership and academia advisory groups.
